Preface

The Singapore Department of Statistics develops national statistical standards and promotes their adoption and use in Singapore. The adoption and use of these standards in the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistics ensure consistency and comparability of data, facilitating relevant and meaningful analysis as well as data sharing.

The Singapore Standard Occupational Classification (SSOC) is the national standard for classifying occupations. The SSOC is used for censuses of population, household surveys and administrative databases. The SSOC adopts the basic framework and principles of the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO) developed by the International Labour Office (ILO). It is reviewed and updated periodically to reflect developments in the labour market, particularly the emergence of new occupations as well as to align with changes in the international standard.

The SSOC 2024 maintains the SSOC 2020 edition's basic classification principles. New codes have been created in SSOC 2024 to reflect the emerging occupations, especially in the Infocomm Technology sector. Obsolete codes have been removed and detailed definitions have been enhanced to provide clarity on the scope of various occupations to facilitate better understanding and appropriate use of the classification.

The review of the SSOC was undertaken by a working group comprising representatives from many agencies, namely the Singapore Department of Statistics, Cyber Security Agency, Economic Development Board, Infocomm Media Development Authority, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Health, Ministry of Manpower, Monetary Authority of Singapore, Public Service Division, SkillsFuture Singapore and Workforce Singapore. Inputs from other ministries and statutory boards have also been incorporated, where appropriate. I would like to thank all who have contributed to the review of the classification.

Part I: Introduction and Methodological Notes

1 Introduction

1.1 The Singapore Standard Occupational Classification (SSOC) is designed for use in the collection of data (e.g. censuses, surveys, administrative records) that requires the classification of occupations. It is also used in the compilation, presentation and analysis of a wide range of statistics, including demographic, social and labour statistics. To ensure the continuing relevance of the SSOC, the classification is revised and updated regularly, taking into account recent developments in the workforce.

1.2 Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) led a multi-agency working group in the revision of the SSOC and consulted public agencies on the updates to the classification. The deliberations and consultations ensure the SSOC would continue to meet the classification needs of users and producers of occupational data.

1.3 Similar to earlier editions of the SSOC, the SSOC 2024 adopts the basic framework of the International Labour Office's International Standard Classification of Occupations 2008 (ISCO-08) for international comparability, with appropriate modifications to take into account national requirements and circumstances.

1.4 In this edition, the terms "skill specialisation" and "skill level" that are used in previous editions are replaced by "broad job specialisation" and "broad job level" respectively, which have the same meaning. New and emerging occupations, particularly in the Infocomm Technology sector, have been added in this latest edition. Detailed definitions for some 50 codes have been enhanced to provide greater clarity to facilitate coding and use of the classification.

2 Structure of SSOC

2.1 The framework used for the design and construction of SSOC is adapted from ISCO-08.

Job and Occupation

2.2 A job is defined in ISCO-08 as "a set of tasks and duties performed, or meant to be performed, by one person, including for an employer or in self-employment".

2.3 Occupation refers to the kind of work performed in a job. The concept of occupation is defined as a "set of jobs whose main tasks and duties are characterised by a high degree of similarity". For example, a private bus driver and public bus captain are two different jobs but have the same occupation as a bus driver since the main tasks and duties are similar, i.e. to operate a bus.

Broad Job Specialisation and Broad Job Level

2.4 Broad job specialisation and broad job level in SSOC are used to arrange occupations into groups. They are defined as follows:

- (a) Broad job specialisation, defined by the field of knowledge required, the tools and machinery used, the materials worked on or with, as well as the kinds of goods and services produced; and
- (b) Broad job level, defined as a function of the complexity and range of the tasks and duties to be performed in an occupation. Broad job level takes into account the formal education required to perform the tasks and duties competently, the amount of informal on-the-job training and/or experience in a related occupation (which may substitute for formal education) and the type/complexity of tasks and duties involved.

2.5 Broad job specialisation is used to differentiate occupational groups at the more detailed two- to four-digit SSOC levels. It sets out how within each major group, occupations are arranged into sub-major groups, minor groups and unit groups.

2.6 Broad job level is used to set out the nature of the work performed for each of the major groups at the one-digit SSOC level. There are four broad job levels which are defined as follows, with Broad Job Level 4 comprising occupations with the most complex tasks and duties, being the highest level:

Broad Job Level 1

Occupations typically involve the performance of simple and routine physical or manual tasks. They may require the use of hand-held tools, such as shovels, or of simple electrical equipment, such as vacuum cleaners. They involve tasks such as cleaning; digging; lifting and carrying materials by hand; sorting, storing or assembling goods by hand (sometimes in the context of mechanised operations); operating non-motorised vehicles; and picking fruit and vegetables.

Occupations may require physical strength and/or endurance. For some jobs, basic literacy and numeracy may be required. If required, these proficiencies would not be a major part of the work.

The first broad job level is defined in operational terms as requiring primary or no formal education. A short period of on-the-job training may be required for some jobs.

Occupations include office cleaners, freight handlers, garden labourers and kitchen assistants.

Broad Job Level 2

Occupations typically involve the performance of tasks such as operating machinery and electronic equipment; driving vehicles; maintenance and repair of electrical and mechanical equipment; and manipulation, ordering and storage of information.

For almost all occupations, the ability to read information such as safety instructions, to make written records of work completed, and to accurately perform simple arithmetical calculations is essential. Many occupations at this broad job level require relatively advanced literacy and numeracy, and good interpersonal communication skills. In some occupations these proficiencies are required for a major part of the work. Many occupations at this broad job level require a high level of manual dexterity.

The second broad job level is defined in operational terms as requiring secondary or post-secondary education. In some cases, experience and on-the-job training may substitute for the formal education.

Occupations include butchers, bus drivers, accounts clerks, dressmakers, shop sales assistants, hairdressers, building electricians and motor vehicle mechanics.

Broad Job Level 3

Occupations typically involve the performance of complex technical and practical tasks that require an extensive body of factual, technical and procedural knowledge in a specialised field. Examples of specific tasks performed include: ensuring compliance with health, safety and related regulations; preparing detailed estimates of quantities and costs of materials and labour required for specific projects; coordinating, controlling and scheduling the activities of other workers; and performing technical functions in support of professionals.

Occupations at this broad job level generally require high level of literacy and numeracy, and well-developed interpersonal communication skills. These proficiencies may include the ability to understand complex written material, prepare factual reports and communicate verbally in difficult circumstances.

The third broad job level is defined operationally as requiring tertiary education leading to an award not equivalent to a university degree or above. In some cases, extensive relevant work experience and prolonged on-the-job training may substitute for the formal education.

Occupations include civil engineering technicians, medical imaging technicians, traffic controllers, logistics/production planners, computer support technicians, and broadcasting and recording technicians.

Broad Job Level 4

Occupations typically involve the performance of tasks that require complex problem solving, decision making and creativity based on an extensive body of theoretical and factual knowledge in a specialised field. The tasks performed typically include analysis and research to extend the body of human knowledge in a particular field, diagnosis and treatment of disease, imparting knowledge to others, and design of structures or machinery and of processes for construction and production.

Occupations at this broad job level generally require extended levels of literacy and numeracy, sometimes at a very high level, and excellent interpersonal communication skills. These proficiencies usually include the ability to understand complex written material and communicate complex ideas in media such as books, images, performances, reports and oral presentations.

The fourth broad job level is defined operationally as requiring tertiary education leading to a university or postgraduate degree/diploma, or the equivalent. In some cases, extensive experience and on-the-job training may substitute for the formal education, or may be required in addition to formal education. In many cases, appropriate formal qualifications are essential requirements for entry to the occupations.

Occupations include lawyers, mathematicians, engineers, university teachers, medical practitioners, musicians, registered nurses, software developers and computer systems analysts.

2.7 The relationship between the ten SSOC major groups and the four broad job levels is summarised in the below table.

	Major Group	Broad Job Level
1	Legislators, Senior Officials and Managers	Not applicable
2	Professionals	4, and possibly 3
3	Associate Professionals and Technicians	3, and possibly 4
4	Clerical Support Workers
5	Service and Sales Workers
6	Agricultural and Fishery Workers	2
7	Craftsmen and Related Trades Workers
8	Plant and Machine Operators and Assemblers
9	Cleaners, Labourers and Related Workers	1
X	Workers Not Elsewhere Classified	Not applicable

2.8 Major Group 1 'Legislators, Senior Officials and Managers' does not have a specific broad job level association as other aspects of the type of work are considered more important, i.e. management and policy making functions. Major Group X is also not associated with a particular broad job level as it is essentially a residual major group.

2.9 The use of educational categories to operationally define the four broad job levels does not imply that the ability to perform the tasks and duties of a given job can be acquired only through formal education. It can also be acquired through continuing education and training, on-the-job training and experience. In addition, the focus of SSOC is to classify jobs whose main tasks and duties are characterised by a high degree of similarity and not on whether a worker in a particular occupation is more or less qualified or proficient than another worker in the same occupation.

Arrangement of the Classification Structure

2.10 The numerical codes of the SSOC 2024 are closely aligned with the ISCO-08 to facilitate comparison between the two classifications where possible. As such, the codes at the two-, three- and four-digit levels may not run consecutively if an ISCO code is not used in the SSOC. For instance, the SSOC does not contain the ISCO code 1113 'Traditional Chiefs and Heads of Village'. However, in some cases there may be insufficient vacant codes to accommodate new occupations in the local context. Some of the SSOC 2020 five-digit codes when dropped or subsumed under another occupational group due to redundancy or low counts of the occupation, may be reused for another occupation in SSOC 2024 so that the codes run consecutively and there are codes freed up to accommodate the new occupations. Hence, users need to refer to both the occupational codes and titles when comparing SSOC 2024 and SSOC 2020.

2.11 The SSOC 2024 comprises five levels of aggregation, namely the major group, sub-major group, minor group, unit group and occupation:

Major Groups (one-digit or alphabetical codes) are the highest level of aggregation and represent very broad fields of work rather than specific types of work performed. There are 10 major groups, including nine numerical groups for various occupational groups, each identified by a corresponding one-digit from 1 to 9, and a Group X for occupations not elsewhere classified.

Sub-major Groups (two-digit codes) are the sub-divisions of the major groups e.g. Science and Engineering Professionals (Sub-major Group 21) within the Major Group 2 'Professionals'.

Minor Groups (three-digit codes) are the sub-divisions within the sub-major groups e.g. Engineering Professionals I (Minor Group 214) within the Sub-major Group 21 'Science and Engineering Professionals'.

Unit Groups (four-digit codes) are sub-divisions of the minor groups. The classification of unit groups is finer and more detailed than that of the minor groups e.g. Civil Engineers (Unit Group 2142) within the Minor Group 214 'Engineering Professionals I'.

Occupations (five-digit codes) are sub-divisions of the unit groups and the most detailed groupings in SSOC.

2.12 The following table summarises the number of sub-groups in each major group:

Major Group	Sub-major Group	Minor Group	Unit Group	Occupation
1 Legislators, Senior Officials and Managers	4	11	34	82
2 Professionals	6	29	104	308
3 Associate Professionals and Technicians	7	29	82	216
4 Clerical Support Workers	5	9	23	60
5 Service and Sales Workers	5	15	38	86
6 Agricultural and Fishery Workers	2	4	7	11
7 Craftsmen and Related Trades Workers	5	19	63	94
8 Plant and Machine Operators and Assemblers	3	17	39	79
9 Cleaners, Labourers and Related Workers	5	12	24	65
X Workers Not Elsewhere Classified	-	-	-	5
Total	42	145	414	1,006

2.13 A numerical or alphanumeric five-digit coding system is used to denote the different levels of classification. The numbering system is hierarchical in nature, showing from the highest level of aggregation (one-digit) to the most detailed level (five-digit). This allows users the flexibility to tabulate, analyse and publish data according to the level of detail required. An example of the different levels under Major Group 2 is shown below.

Classification Level	Classification Title	Classification Code
Major Group	Professionals	2
Sub-major Group	Science and Engineering Professionals	21
Minor Group	Engineering Professionals I	214
Unit Group	Civil Engineers	2142
Occupation	Civil Engineer	21421
	Building Construction Engineer	21422

2.14 While the SSOC is a hierarchical system, all occupations in the same major group have the same broad job levels. The ordered arrangements of occupations in the sub-major, minor and unit groups within the same major group do not imply different complexity of the occupations. For instance, occupations in Major Group 2 are all associated with the same Broad Job Level 4 or possibly 3. It does not mean that Sub-major Group 21 'Science and Engineering Professionals' has a higher broad job level and is more complex than Sub-major Group 22 'Health Professionals'. Similarly, Sub-major Group 22 is not of a higher significance or complexity than Unit Group 2655 'Actors'.

Scheme of Coding

2.15 Generally, in cases where a given level of classification is not divided into groups or occupations at the next more detailed level of classification, the last digit of the code for the only group or occupation at the next detailed level would be '0'. This holds true for '0' at the four- and five-digit levels. For instance, the Unit Group 'Secretaries and Verbatim Reporters' is coded as 4120 as the Minor Group 'Secretaries and Verbatim Reporters' (code 412) contains only one unit group. On the other hand, at the two- and three-digit levels, '0' may be used to denote supervisory category instead. For instance, Sub-major Group 'Clerical Supervisors' (code 40) is not the only sub-major group in the Major Group 4 'Clerical Support Workers'.

2.16 At a given level of aggregation other than the one-digit level, the digit '9' that appears in the last digit position at the respective level denotes residual occupations grouped at the respective level. These residual categories usually comprise a range of the less common types of occupational groups which are not significant enough to justify a separate code. They are classified in a separate category so that no occupation, however small or insignificant, is left out of the classification scheme. The description of such codes usually ends with the term 'not elsewhere classified' at the two-digit to four-digit levels and the abbreviation 'n.e.c.' at the five-digit level.

Detailed Definitions, Alphabetical Index and Correspondence Tables

2.17 Detailed definitions are available for occupations (five-digit code) and unit groups (four-digit code). The definition of an occupation (five-digit code) includes a brief lead statement describing the key tasks and duties of the workers, to help users distinguish the different occupations. Unit group definition contains a brief lead statement describing the key tasks and duties of the workers and a more detailed listing of the tasks. Where the tasks are not common for an occupation, they are qualified with the word 'may' in the statements. For example, the occupational definition for training manager is:

Occupation 12123 Training manager

Training manager plans, directs and coordinates the training and development activities of the staff of an organisation. He/she may also design and develop new training modules and supervise all the activities related to the planning and delivery of these programmes.

2.18 The SSOC's alphabetical index contains a wide variety of commonly used titles used to describe occupations. It enables users to link the alternative occupation titles, including Singapore Skills Framework (SFw) job roles, to the principal occupation titles used in the classification structure. It should be noted that the alphabetical index is not exhaustive. Jobs with titles that are ambiguous, or where a particular SFw job role can be mapped to several possible SSOC codes, are excluded from the listing (e.g. Designer in the SFw – Design, which can be coded under various SSOC depending on the type of design done). The alphabetical index is a useful tool to assign classification codes to responses to the questions in statistical and administrative data collections.

2.19 Two-way correspondence tables between SSOC 2024 and SSOC 2020, and SSOC 2024 and ISCO-08 are available at the most detailed level. Correspondence tables between SSOC 2024 and SSOC 2020 help users to link or backcast data that are in different versions of the SSOC due a change to the scope, creation of new codes or deletion of existing codes. Correspondence tables between SSOC 2024 and ISCO-08 also enable users to convert SSOC-based data into ISCO, facilitating international comparability.

2.20 The detailed definitions, alphabetical index and correspondence tables are available on the SingStat Website and are updated biannually if required. These live documents allow for timely minor updates (without changing the structure) in between SSOC review cycles.

3 Classification Principles

3.1 The classification principles form the basis on which the SSOC 2024 is structured and applied.

Basic Principles

3.2 The primary objective of the SSOC is to classify all the occupations of the civilian working population, but with provisions for the collective classification of those in the armed services and the foreign diplomatic personnel in occupations X3000 and X4000. It is not applicable to persons outside the labour force such as housewives, full-time students, retired persons and voluntary/non-salaried social workers.

3.3 Occupations are classified according to the type of work performed. Persons who perform the same principal tasks and duties are considered as doing the same type of work and classified under the same occupational group regardless of work experience, employment status and qualifications.

3.4 Broad job level provides a useful indication on where to classify a job. However, it should be emphasised that a job's principal tasks and duties take priority over the broad job level in determining where to classify the job.

Occupations with Multiple Tasks and Duties

3.5 Some occupations may involve a variety and range of tasks and duties that could fall under the specified scope of various occupations, and the principal tasks are not possible to be ascertained. In such cases, the following rules shall apply, in the order of precedence given below:

- (a) In cases where the tasks and duties performed require different broad job levels, the job should be classified according to those tasks and duties which require the highest job level (i.e. Broad Job Level 4 followed by Broad Job Level 3 and so on). For example, a job which requires driving a van and delivering goods should be classified in Unit Group 8322 'Car, Taxi, Van and Light Goods Vehicle Drivers' (Broad Job Level 2) instead of Unit Group 9333 'Material and Freight Handling Workers' (Broad Job Level 1).

- (b) In cases where the tasks and duties are associated with different stages of the process of producing and distributing goods and services, the tasks and duties related to the production stage should take priority over associated tasks and duties, such as those related to the sales, marketing and transportation of the same goods. For example, a worker who bakes bread and pastries and then sells them, should be classified as a baker and not a sales worker.
- (c) In cases where the tasks and duties are of the same broad job level and at similar production stage, then the fundamental predominance rule applies based on assumptions of the most amount of time spent on specific main tasks/duties. For example, a worker who cooks lunch and takes care of children in an after-school child care centre would likely spend more time attending to the needs of the children instead of cooking for them and would be classified as a child/after school care centre worker instead of a cook.

Managing Directors, Chief Executives and General Managers

3.6 Managing directors, chief executives or general managers in Unit Group 1120 determine and formulate policies, plan, direct and coordinate the activities of their companies or organisations. They are generally assisted by at least two other managers, and operate within guidelines from their boards or councils. Those with similar job titles but whose job scopes do not fulfil the above criteria are classified in occupations corresponding to their job duties and scopes of work. Managers responsible for specialised functions within a specific geographic area are excluded from this unit group. For example, regional sales managers are classified in Unit Group 1221 'Sales and Business Development Managers' instead.

Managers and Size of Organisation

3.7 Occupations classified in Minor Group 112 'Managing Directors, Chief Executives and General Managers' are usually senior managers in organisations that are large enough to have a hierarchy of managers. However, most occupations classified in Sub-major Group 14 'Hospitality, Retail and Related Services Managers' are in relatively small organisations that do not usually have hierarchies of managers. Workers classified in Sub-major Groups 12 'Administrative and Commercial Managers' and 13 'Production and Specialised Services Managers', may be employed in large hierarchical organisations or in relatively small organisations that provide specialist services to other organisations.

3.8 Information about the size of the organisation in which an individual manager is employed is not generally relevant to decisions about the most appropriate SSOC code. This is because SSOC Major Group 1 is organised according to functional specialisation and not according to the size of the organisation managed. To ascertain whether a job should be classified under SSOC Major Group 1, information on both the job title and the main tasks or duties performed should be obtained. The main tasks or duties would take priority in determining where to classify the job.

Working Proprietors

3.9 Working proprietors refer to those who operate and manage their own businesses. Occupations are to be classified according to the type of work performed regardless of the worker's employment status. This is because being an owner of the business in which he/she is employed may have little or no relationship to the kind of work performed.

Supervisory Occupations

3.10 Both supervisors and managers are responsible for the subordinates they supervise. However the former do not have authority to make decisions in business strategy, budgeting and/or hiring and firing of staff.

3.11 Supervisory occupations, excluding those managerial or professional personnel, are generally classified in the same occupational code as the workers they supervised due to similarities in the tasks and duties performed. If the tasks and duties of the supervisory occupations are distinct, occupational codes are created within the same sub-major or unit group as the workers supervised. For instance, those in Minor Group 710 'Supervisors and General Foremen (Building and Related Trades)' who supervise those in Minor Group 711 'Building Frame and Related Trades Workers'.

Apprentices and Trainees

3.12 Apprentices and trainees are classified according to the occupation they are training for, if they are employed in the capacity of apprentice or trainee.<sup>1</sup> Apprentice carpenters and apprentice electricians, for example, are classified as carpenters and electricians. Medical and legal interns are similarly classified as doctors and lawyers. Where trainees also have jobs in a related occupation, these jobs should be classified according to the work required to be performed, such as when medical or legal students, for example, are employed as ward attendants, medical assistants or legal clerks.

3.13 Helpers and aides are not treated in the same manner as apprentices and trainees. Helpers and aides are workers associated with an occupation by assisting another worker performing the occupation.

4 Comparison with SSOC 2020

Overview

4.1 The more significant changes in the SSOC 2024 compared to SSOC 2020 are summarised below:

<sup>1</sup> Where students are undertaking work practice not as part of an employment arrangement (e.g. as an intern undergoing unpaid work attachment programmes), they are not classified according to economic activity status as employed, and their learning activity would therefore not normally be classified by occupation. As this situation may be fairly common in educational programmes for particular occupational groups, care should be taken to check their economic activity status when considering occupational titles such as "student teacher" or "pupil nurse" in statistical collections.

- SSOC 2024 replaces the terms “skill specialisation” and “skill level” with “broad job specialisation” and “broad job level” respectively.
- New occupations in Infocomm Technology, Green Economy and other sectors that are distinct from SSOC 2020 codes have been added.
- New three-digit Minor Group ‘Social Services, Counselling and Related Professionals’ has been created to distinguish social services related professionals from social science researchers and religious professionals.
- Some occupations across major groups and unit groups have been reclassified due to developments in main tasks/duties of occupations over time.
- About 20 SSOC codes, mainly under Major Groups 7 and 8, have been removed or merged due to obsolete or low employment counts.
- Improvements to alphabetical index, detailed definitions and occupational titles in classification structure have been incorporated.

4.2 A comparison of the number of codes at various levels and major groups between SSOC 2024 and SSOC 2020 is shown in the following table:

Major Group	SSOC 2024				SSOC 2020

Replacement of “Skill Specialisation” and “Skill Level” Terminologies by “Broad Job Specialisation” and “Broad Job Level” Respectively

4.3 SkillsFuture Singapore (SSG), as the national skills authority of Singapore, has developed a common skills language that aligns employers’, educators’ and job seekers’ understanding of skills. This clarity reduces mismatches between the skills employers need and the skills individuals have, leading to a more efficient labour market. The embodiment of the common skills language takes shape through several key initiatives, including the Singapore Skills Framework and the annual Skills Demand for the Future Economy report. SSG continues to develop and will release resources that support the understanding of common skills language across the nation.

4.4 Hence, “broad job specialisation” and “broad job level”, which retained the ISCO-08’s concept of using education, informal training, experience and type/complexity of tasks to classify occupations into groups, have been introduced in SSOC 2024 while any references to skills should refer to the resources developed by SSG.

Creation of New Codes Related to Infocomm Technology

4.5 As Singapore made strides in leveraging technology for growth and innovation, committing to the Digital Economy through strategic partnerships and initiatives aimed at exploring the potential of technologies such as Artificial Intelligence (AI) and business digitalisation, several Infocomm Technology related occupations become more prevalent. Hence, new five-digit codes have been created for occupations in Sub-major Group 25 ‘Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Professionals’ such as ICT product manager, AI applied researcher, AI/Machine Learning engineer and development operations (DevOps) engineer. With the increasing number of cybersecurity attacks and threats targeting businesses and individuals, cybersecurity professionals have been seeing greater demand from employers. New security occupations such as cyber incident investigation specialist and threat analysis specialist have been created to improve the coverage of cybersecurity professionals.

Creation of New Codes for Green Economy Jobs

4.6 With the “Green Economy” part of the five key pillars of the Singapore Green Plan 2030, there is an expected increase in demand for jobs related to sustainability. For instance, new five-digit codes have been created for Green Economy occupations in Major Group 2 ‘Professionals’ as given in the below table, where there is demand for new carbon management services and jobs in Singapore.

SSOC 2024	SSOC 2024 Title
21333	Environmental analyst
24136	Energy portfolio manager
24214	Sustainability project development/management professional
24354	Environmental commodities trader

Creation of New Codes for Other New Occupations

4.7 Further to the above, to cater to the increase in occupations in certain fields with main tasks and duties that are distinct from existing occupations in the SSOC as well as new occupations becoming more prevalent in emerging industries, separate five-digit codes have been created for them in the SSOC 2024. This includes new five-digit codes created for agriculturist and aquaculturist, which were previously subsumed in the residual code. A new code has also been created for non-financial risk analyst as such role becomes increasingly distinct from the generic policy planning professionals. A separate code has also been created for executive secretary in acknowledgement of the higher skill level required compared to the usual secretaries to perform the additional specialised organisational and administrative tasks to support top executives.

4.8 To better reflect the different tasks and duties performed by credit and loans officers from that of other financial services back-office associate professional support roles, a new four-digit unit group has been created to distinguish these roles which typically perform back-office transactions and operational support, from credit and loans officers who analyse and evaluate financial information on applications for credit.

Creation of New Three-digit Minor Group for Social Services, Counselling and Related Professionals

4.9 A new three-digit Minor Group 266 'Social Services, Counselling and Related Professionals' has been created to separately group social services related professionals, which were previously classified in the same minor group as social science researchers and religious professionals. This is in recognition of the growing importance of Care Economy in Singapore and also enables a larger variety of occupations to be identified in the social services sector. For instance, a new four-digit Unit Group 2664 'Employment Support Professionals' has been created under this minor group to accommodate emerging occupations such as job coach (disability) who provides assistance to persons with disabilities to secure and retain employment.

Reclassification of Occupations Across Major Groups and Unit Groups

4.10 Some occupations have been reclassified across unit groups, taking into consideration the main tasks and duties of these occupations in the context of Singapore and developments in recent years. For instance, 'multimedia games designer' and 'interaction designer' have been reclassified from Unit Group 2166 to Unit Group 2512 given that the nature of work is more related to information and communications technology (ICT). Another example is the reclassification of 'Educarer' from Major Group 5 to Major Group 3. This takes into account that other than just providing care and supervision, educarers also plan and conduct educational and play activities that are intended to promote the development of children below primary school-going age, in line with the tasks of preschool educators in Major Group 3.

Removal of Obsolete Codes

4.11 SSOC codes that are obsolete or have low employment counts have been removed. This is to ensure that the SSOC remains relevant and allows for new codes to be created to meet users' needs. About 20 obsolete five-digit codes, mostly in Major Groups 7 and 8, have been merged into approximately 16 five-digit codes.

Improvements to Alphabetical Index

4.12 Some 1,000 new alphabetical index entries have been added to facilitate easier coding. For comprehensiveness and ease of identifying occupational titles without the need to cross check between multiple documents, SSOC occupational titles have been added to the alphabetical index. They are labelled "Principal Title" to distinguish them from the alternative titles in the alphabetical index. An additional of some 270 new job titles have been added in the index by including constituent job titles from main occupational titles to facilitate the use of the index for coding. For example, SSOC 13302 'Software and applications manager' will have "Software development manager" and "Application development manager" included in the alphabetical index as shown in the below table.

SSOC 2024	SSOC 2024 Alphabetical Index Description	Category
13302	Software and applications manager	Principal Title
13302	Software development manager	Alternative Title
13302	Application development manager	Alternative Title

Improvements to Detailed Definitions

4.13 Detailed definitions for some 50 codes have been enhanced to provide greater clarity in the descriptions of the main tasks/duties of the occupations in order to facilitate easier coding and appropriate use of the classification.

Stylistic Edits to Classification Structure and Detailed Definitions

4.14 To improve stylistic coherence across the titles in classification structure and detailed definitions, stylistic edits have been implemented.

4.15 Where multiple occupations are mentioned in the five-digit occupational title, a "/" would be used for consistency and better distinction of the different occupations. Instances of "including" and "e.g." in the main occupational titles will be removed, with these additional titles shifted to the illustrative examples in the detailed definitions for the occupation and/or added to the alphabetical index. Titles for residual codes from the sub-major group (two-digit) to occupation (five-digit) have also been aligned in the usage of terms "Other", "Not elsewhere classified" or "n.e.c.". The detailed definitions for the residual codes at the unit group (four-digit) and occupation (five-digit) have also been standardised.

5 Linking SSOC with SFw<sup>2</sup>

5.1 To facilitate analysis and comparison between SFw related information and SSOC, the SFw job roles have been mapped to relevant SSOC codes in the alphabetical index. New SSOC codes have been created if necessary, and changes to the scope and titles of existing SSOC codes have been made to improve the linkage between SSOC and SFw. The alphabetical index is updated half-yearly to take into account the refresh of the SFw.

5.2 Nonetheless, it should be noted that SSOC and SFw are not directly comparable due to differences in coverage, construct and purpose. SSOC is a statistical classification that is adapted from ISCO to ensure international comparability and covers all occupations whereas SFw provides information on sectors, new and changing job roles, as well as in-demand and emerging skills required for the job roles.

6 How to Determine the Appropriate Occupational Code for an Occupation

6.1 There are two ways to find an appropriate SSOC code in SSOC 2024:

- (a) Refer to the alphabetical index or use the SingStat SSOC Search to look for the job title by which the occupation is known, and select the most appropriate SSOC code by referring to the detailed definition. Consideration should be given to possible synonyms and abbreviations of the words in the job title; or
- (b) Refer to the classification structure to classify the job broadly, either at the sub-major, minor group or unit group level before narrowing down to the most appropriate five-digit code at the occupational level. The choice of SSOC code should be confirmed by referring to the detailed definition.

<sup>2</sup> The Skills Framework (SFw) is an integral component of the Singapore's Industry Transformation Maps. It aims to create a common skills language for individuals, employers training providers and tripartite partners which facilitates skills recognition and support the design of training programmes for skills and career development, enhance business competitiveness and support employment and employability. As at end-December 2023, there were 35 sectoral SFws and over 1,790 job roles covering more than two-thirds of the workforce.
